Anti-doping system siamthat a ngai - IOC p

International Olympic Committee president Thomas Bach chose to announce a new anti-doping system for the 2020 Tokyo Olympics, saying it would be a "game-changer" for the sport.

Bach, however, did not say when the new system would be implemented, but it is expected to be in place for the Tokyo Games.

The new system, known as the "Global Doping Agency" (GDA), will be a joint effort between the IOC and the World Anti-Doping Agency (WADA).

The GDA will be responsible for the development and implementation of the anti-doping program for the Tokyo Games.

The IOC president said that the new system would be a "game-changer" for the sport, and that it would help to ensure that the Tokyo Games are the most successful yet.
